ABSTRACT

Memory device having banks of memory cells organized into two groups of banks that share control circuitry and a data buffer to provide an interface to a memory bus, but which are independently operable enough to support unrelated transactions with each group, and can be used to stagger read operations with shortened burst transfers so as to minimize dead time on a memory bus.